From Grahame

It is difficult to drive through streets which have been affected by flood without becoming emotional. What we see piled on the footpath is heartbreaking, yet this is just a part of the way our communities have been damaged by this disaster. In this most difficult situation, some of our communities lost the benefits of technology: no mobile coverage, no internet no power. At one point I was in the parish administration building in Mullumbimby and thought to use the land line. The phone worked but all the phone numbers of people I was concerned for were mobiles. I cannot imagine the fear of being isolated and not knowing if help would come, the fear of being disconnected from community. Brenda and I have been able to be safe. We have had food and power and the capacity to let our family know we were safe throughout. So many have not had these comforts of emotional support and what we call basic necessities. Too many continue to go without these.

As newcomers to the district, Brenda and I have been all but overwhelmed by the spirit of community. By the random and coordinated acts of kindness and love. From the offers of free pizzas and coffees to life saving rescues and offers from strangers - "can we help?" People longing to make a positive contribution and be meaningfully connected in community. Our streets have once again become places to meet and share. Our experience of living through the droughts of the past twenty years in some challenging situations, has taught Brenda and I the importance of being willing to share, of giving where we are able while maintaining a willingness to accept help when needed. This sharing in community may sometimes involve helping to replace lost possessions and physical needs. It will always involve sharing care, comfort, and love.
